The Scottish Toponymy in Transition project at the University of Glasgow is funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council for three years (2011–14). It aims to: research and publish a place-name volume each for Clackmannanshire, Kinross-shire and Menteith; commence place-name surveys of Ayrshire and Berwickshire, and develop a framework for completing the survey of Perthshire (of which Menteith is the first volume); exchange knowledge with local communities through a series of talks, walks, exhibitions and other events. For further information, see <http://www.gla.ac.uk/departments/celtic/projects/stit>

Place-Name Walk from Tillicoultry to Alva
Tuesday 19 June and Saturday 23 June 2012
The Woolpack 10.00

An exploration on foot of some of the places and their names in and around Tillicoultry, Sauchie and Alva, taking approximately 3 hours.

Introduction

What is a place-name walk? It is a walk through past and present, through landscape and language. It is an attempt to see the modern environment through the eyes of the people who gave it the names which we still use today, taking the names themselves as our guides. These names are guides also to the languages of the past: for Clackmannanshire these are chiefly British/Pictish, Gaelic and Scots, together spanning around 1,500 years, with some names going back even further, such as Dumyat ‘fort of the Maeatae’, a local tribe first mentioned in the 3rd century.

The walk starts and finishes in Tillicoultry [Tullicultre c.1190, Tullecultry c.1195, Gaelic ‘mound/hill(ock) of the back-land’]. The present town grew out of several towns or farms, such as Colinstoun [Collingisdawak 1480, ‘Colin’s davoch’ (a large unit of land-assessment), then ‘Colin’s town’], later Wester Tillicoultry, Elistoun [Eliotisdawac 1480], and Harviestoun [Heryyisdawac 1480], all Scots names.

The Route

Begins at the Woolpack Inn (a name redolent of the once all-important local wool trade) in Glassford Square (named after Duncan Glassford, owner of the Tillicoultry estate from 1806 to 1810).

From here walk down Upper Mill Street and turn left into Frederick Street. This part of Tillicoultry was on the lands of Cairnton [Carntoun 1480, Scots ‘farm of the cairn/burial mound’]. Go along Walker Terrace [named after Provost A. Walker, retired 1900, <http://www.tillicoultry.org.uk/streets.htm>], with good views of the hills, Wester Kirk Craig and Easter Kirk Craig to the left, both named after the old parish kirk of Tillicoultry, to the junction with Hill Street. St Serf’s miracle of raising back to life a pair of dead twin boys ‘in Tuligculterin’ can be placed in the area to the north, near where the old kirk of Tillicoultry stood.

Walk down Hill Street, carefully cross the main road (A91), then head down Moss Road (A908) [‘the road to the moss or bog’] and just after passing Elistoun Drive on the left, follow the Devon Way path to the right. In the distance on the ridge beyond Sterling Mills can be seen Coalsnaughton [Coschenachtan 1480, containing Nechtan, the Gaelic form of the Pictish royal name Naiton]. Follow the path round and cross the bridge over the River Devon [aquam de Douane c.1180, probably from a Celtic word meaning ‘deep’].

As the path continues, more and more of the Ochils [from a Celtic word meaning ‘high’] come into view; those visible being Dumyat [Demyat 1783, ‘fort of the Maeatae’], Myreton Hill [above The Myretoun (Myretoun 1665) ‘marsh-farm’], Craig Leith [Craigleith 1591, Gaelic creag liath ‘grey crag’], Big Torry and Wee Torry [from Gaelic tòrr ‘(steep, pointed) hill’], The Nebit (also known as the Middle Hill of Alva) [Nevot 1537, Scots nebbit ‘having a nose’], Wood Hill (planted with trees by Sir John Erskine of Alva in 1725), Rough Knowles (a form of Scots knowes, English knoll), Castle Craig (quarried) [site of a prehistoric fort], The Law [1860, Scots law ‘(prominent) hill’], Easter and Wester Kirk Craigs [1860], Elistoun Hill, Bank Hill [1860, from Bank de Dolour 1563, Scots bank ‘slope’], and Hillfoot Hill [above Hillfoot House and Farm (Hillfit c.1680)].

After looking down on Glenfoot [1783] with its bridge over the river, further on to the right is Marchglen [1866], so called as it lies on the march or boundary of Tillicoultry and Alloa parishes. Black Row (now Ben View) and Blackfaulds to the left remind us that this area was once famous for its coal-mines. The site of Blains Well, named after St Blain (of Bute and Dunblane), whose chapel was at Sauchie Tower, is marked on a 1799 plan of Sauchie Colliery and lies somewhere in the field to the right.

Passing by Bankhead Farm follow the road past the new SSPCA National Rescue Centre to Sauchie Tower [Salwehop 1266, Salacheth c.1320, Salquhy 1451, Gaelic ‘willow-place’], built about 1431 by Sir James Schaw, comptroller to the king.

The next stage of the walk follows the busy road to Alva. Great care should be taken for this stretch. To the left is Diverswell [1798] and at the bottom of the brae on the right is Howetown [Scots ‘farm in a hollow’]. Cross the River Devon into Alva parish by Shavelhaugh Bridge, the name from Shavelhaugh [Sheval hall c.1750, Scots ‘twisted or squint hall’], which once stood by the road west of Kersiepow [Carspow 1681, Scots ‘a pool or sluggish stream on carse-land’] can be seen to the right.

After crossing the main road in Alva [Alueth and Alweth c.1175, Gaelic ‘cliff plain’], walk up Silverburn Gardens at the side of the Silver Burn [flowing from old silver mines in the Ochils]. Follow the path to the right towards Wood Hill and the Ochil Hills Woodland Park. Pass Alva House Walled Garden, the remains of the landscaped grounds of Alva House, and the site of Alva House itself. Cross the Wood Burn, which marks the parish and former county boundary. To the left the quarry marks the site of Castle Craig and by the golf course is Lady’s Well [probably dedicated to St Mary]. Turn right down Shillinghill [1866; Scots sheeling hill ‘a piece of rising ground where grain was winnowed by the wind’] and proceed to Upper Mill Street to reach the Woolpack at Glassford Square.
